

ABSTRACT

A method and system for high-pass filtering to remove DC and/or low frequency components of a receive signal from the transducer of a level measurement system.

In one embodiment, the method includes generating a maximum signal profile and

- 5 a minimum signal profile for the receive signal, generating a midpoint reference signal from the maximum and minimum signal profiles and subtracting the midpoint reference signal from the receive signal to produce a filtered signal.